BOYS SENT TO REFORMATORY

Claybaugh and Cassatt Boys Sent to Huntingdon Reformatory for Burglary of Wolfert Store at Round Top.

Leo Claybaugh and Clarence Cassatt were on Monday sentenced by the Court to undergo an imprisonment in the Huntingdon Reformatory for their burglary of the Wolfert store near Round Top several weeks ago. It will be remembered that the boys plead guilty at August Term of Court but that Judge Swope said he wished to become better acquainted with the facts before imposing sentence.

On Tuesday he said what he had learned was decidedly unfavorable to the boys, that there was a general feeling of fear prevailing in their community over what they might do if released, and that he believed a term in the Reformatory would do them more good than if they were to be released on probation.

Frank Twomey and Paul Twomey, aged 16 and 12 years respectively were called to the witness stand and testified that the two prisoners had threatened in their presence to catch the elder Mr. Wolfert and rob him.

When the Twomey boys warned them that Mr. Wolfert carried a revolver, Claybaugh and Cassatt answered that they would hit him on the head and use the gun then he believe. Harry Geissman was also called and testified that several years ago Mrs. Claybaugh had complained of the conduct of her son and said she could not control him.

William Hersh, Esq., representing the Claybaugh family, pointed out that he was but 15 years of age in June and that he was also the support of his mother, that she had a great deal of sorrow and was on the verge of nervous prostration.

The Court then declared that his investigation left the case facts decidedly unfavorable to the culprits and imposed sentence. The boys hung their heads, neither raising his eyes while Judge Swope told them of the good training they would receive while at Huntingdon and of the possibilities of making desirable citizens of them selves after released.

A CASE OF HEDGING.

By GEORGE HERBERT BOHN.
[Copyright, 1905, by American Press Association.]

When I was studying medicine, one afternoon I was in the dissecting room burning to get through with a subject before the instructor should unlock for the night. An examination was before me the next morning and there would be no opportunity to return to the dissecting room for some time to come. I had finished every muscle except a foot when time waggled, and, stuffing it in a pocket, I used to carry medical entries between the city and the place I lived in the suburbs, I left them, intending to finish my work at home.

On my way I made out a guess of what to do with the subject with these arrangers. Finishing a lumpy piece as my station was reached, I got off the train and left the owner cold to be identified I would be subject to a charge of larceny preferred by an effort to get rid of the corpse piecemeal. The way I chose to have done was to report my loss to the police at once. I thought of this before doing so, and concluded to look into the box I had taken with me to discovering his owner. It was locked, and I was advised to force it.

The only articles in it were burglars' tools.

"Well," I said to myself, "whoever has taken my subject is not likely to report his find, since by doing so he will incriminate himself. There is no necessity for my giving the subject any further attention."

Were it not for one of those strange coincidences that are continually happening my story would end here. A year after I was possessor of another by house, or, rather, my father's, was robbed. I happened to be one of the men downstairs, where they had turned on the lights, and recognized him by the conical jaw as he was going out the front door. He turned and gave me a glance which knocked me down. He made his escape by offering the latter instant I saw his face I recognized my partner and went in the direction when I had anticipated snicketa. I wondered how he had recognized me, but it occurred to me that he had seen me, and that was all my luck.

Two more years passed. One day while on a train I saw him took a seat beside me, and when I looked at him I recognized the contour of wrist and hand in the same man the burglar who had wished my subject into his keeping. My first thought was to summon the conductor and have him arrested and turned over to police. My second was to turn up my coat collar and let my hat down over my eyes so that the burglar would not know my face. Then I considered that he had seen me once, since when I had grown a beard. Then, second thought, made a remark to him. He replied, and we entered into conversation.

We knew each other now, so the ideal should be made of burglary against him. I would not be a witness against him. He had been possessed of my subject. He knew it. I was uncertain what, if any, use he would make of it in establishing a counteratcase. I concluded to discover if possible what his intentions were in this respect. I also told him the story of the exchange of sketches as he had supposed in a friend of mine. He turned and after fishing a while drew me his mind confidently.

"I see you are the man with whom I played wicket and who went off with my sketch."

"And you are the man who rotated a moon in it for a purse and who thought it caught by the coattail and recognized as he passed. Suppose I give you away?"

"You'd stand trial on a charge of murder."

"I can easily prove that I was a medical student and was taking the foot home for dissection."

"Not as fast, please. To lend you a off I learned a missing man and had secured evidence to prove conclusively that a man of your description was soon to murder the person who had discovered. Should I turned over your satchel with the foot in it to the police?"

Suddenly it dawned upon me how foolish I had been not to report the case myself. It would have blocked any opponents of me.

"If you report me," he continued, "persons supposed to be unknown to me will inform the police of your identity with the man who was murdered as you pounder. You will be prejudiced, tried and the host of circumstantial evidence furnished to prove that you had a grudge against him, murdered him and intended to protect yourself in case of discovery by the fact that you were a medical student studying anatomy."

A mental vision of one of those celebrated murder cases of which I would be the central figure and wherein half the people believed in the accused's guilt and the other half in his innocence rose before me.

"My friend," I said, "it's the eye of the law against me before, as now either we would both be suspected, probably, but in the next thing to being proved criminals. I am quite willing to report the matter if you do not mind, I should be ruined. Go in peace."

THE GRANGE

LOOKING BACKWARD.

The Progress of the Grange From Insignificant Beginnings.

An Occasional Glance Over the Past Achievements of the Grange Re-calls Many Facts Which Should Be Studies For the Farmers of the Nation.

The following paper was read by Mrs. M. L. Gardner before a grange in Washington county, O., in commemoration of the thirty-seventh anniversary of the founding of the Order.

A few of us here today can look back to the time of the civil war, when from every state there went out to unite, only, and, God grant, never, Northsouth, fathers, sons, united forever to protect or secure their rights. In time the struggle ended and all returned to peaceful pursuits. The unanimous devotion the west of man's labor was opposed, and in some was time more institutions then in that of farming. The unused plowshears and the pruning hook, the mower and reaper, the two, three or four years of absence from the farm, the loss of experience, to fences and buildings a disappointed, discouraged farmer and farming were at a discount.

But in the northwest, where nature in most wise provided for such conveniences and comforts few, there lived a class of intelligent, thrifty, self-reliant farmer, full of faith, hope, charity and the Golden rule, and possessed of a fellow men. Eventually he was employed by the United States homes of agriculture to call together for consultation. His extensive travel and close observation of the many conditions of the vast and immense loss the farmer and horticulturist was compelled to meet in the transit and scarcity of transportation facilities. Many conventions were held, resulting under California's sun, while the Golden Gate opened its doors and the valley ionging for just such fruits. In the fertile valleys of Georgia and Carolina flowing with wheat and corn, valencias and Mediterranean sweets, the eastern and southern states were suffering for the necessities of life.

This Minnesota farmer believed that organized association was the remedy for this and other great disadvantages which the farmers of the country generally were laboring, provided the bravest and most determined of their number rose to demand a voice in the senate and house of representatives of the legislature of agriculture. The heroic made the sacrifice, and the Order was born. It was then discovered that the agricultural class was without a name, a place in name and powerless to carry any measure for the benefit of the country. After much thought and effort it was decided to name the new organization the Order.

Accordingly on Dec. 4, 1867, O. H. Kelley, the Minnesota farmer; William Saunders, the florist, and seven associates; Ireneo Bry. A. B. Grosh of the same state; W. M. Ireland of the post office department, J. R. Thompson and Bet. F. Thompson of Pennsylvania; F. A. McDowell, a New York horticulturist, and John Trimble, of Washington, clerk of Mr. Kelley, organized the Order of Patrons of Husbandry, and the order for members only. O. H. Kelley and Mrs. Kelley, Miss Carrie Hall and Mrs. Ben McDowell, the national grange lecturers, Mrs. Kelley and Mrs. Mc-Dowell and is still living in New York state.

The present finds us, on many issues, conquerors. We have established many of the most popular, useful and honored departments of our government, and through the sentiment of its interests a code of laws made more reasonable. Rural free delivery is a grand accomplishment. The letter struggle for the new postal savings bank, the parcel post, the period of thirty-three years, but it was at last established, and it is still there. This is still much to be overcome. Another is the telephone and telegraph system. The swords that we shall use in the future are ballots, and the battle is the book. Today the grange is the equal of any organization in America. Its unity it is strong, its power for good unquestioned. Its educational power and of its work has gone into history. To-day the grange stands for the best progress and hopeful for the future.

A Member Chosen.

The largest number of members initiated in the Ishmael valley was shipped in Wednesday night by the Ohio & Pennsylvania coal storage company. The class consisted of 18 men and boys, and the measured 22 inches high, 46 inches in circumference around the shoulders, and weighed 1,000 pounds. It took 18 men to handle the big fellow in the car, and it was pressed into shape by a hydraulic pressure machine. The president of the coal storage company, the company's chemist and the engineer of the cold storage company, the company's chemist and the engineer of the cold storage company, the company's chemist and the engineer of the cold

BUSY BURGLARS SCARED AWAY

York Springs again Visited by Early Morning Prowlers who are Frightened away before they Gain Entrance to Store.

Burglars were again busy in York Springs early Saturday morning and the town is now considered one their frequent visitations. Four young men who have been arrested about the village are for several weeks are strongly suspected of having instituted the attempt and the authorities are now after them.

The store of C. W. Gardner and Company was the scene of operations early Saturday morning. Four large iron bars were sawed through and an entrance out of the back window but before the men could get in they were frightened away by an early riser. They made their exit at about 4 o'clock.

That the would-be burglars are the four youths suspected is made all the more probable by the fact that they spent most of the time on the previous evening. The entire building with the exception of the window at which they worked, is connected with an electrical burglary alarm system and they evidently found that the one window was the only place there they could operate with any degree of security. That window had been closed and barred for some time and was thought to be secure.

York Springs has been visited frequently by marauders of this kind and efforts are now being put forth to apprehend the guilty parties and to put an end to their dangerous practice.

ABOUT SURPRISE PARTIES

Accounts of surprise parties and various other social events in the country appear in these columns from time to time. We are always glad to receive the accounts and take pleasure in publishing them but there are several rules which we must ask those who send them in to observe. The accounts must be sent in as early as possible after the event. We should have them for publication the day after they occur. Some come in then and four weeks late and for that reason never appear. Many other surprise parties find their way to the waste basket because the name of the sender is unknown. This must be attached or account will not be used.

HEIMER—SOWERS

Roy Heimer, of York Springs, and Miss Beulah Sowers, of Gettysburg, were married Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Zimmerman, York, by the Rev. R. D. Clare, pastor of St. Matthew's Lutheran church. The ceremony was performed at 8:30 o'clock in the presence of a number of friends of the couple. The bride wore a handsome traveling suit of gray. The bride was the recipient of a great many gifts. A wedding dinner was served after the ceremony, following which Mr. and Mrs. Heimer departed on a wedding trip to Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

BIG PEACH SHIPMENT

The biggest shipments of peaches by the Cumberland Valley railroad this season, have been made this week. The bulk of this business is originating from points along the Waynesboro branch and from Quincy and Mont Alto the fruit is being forwarded. Not as high as 40 degrees are refrigerator cars at one shipment.

Some of the peaches are being shipped as far north as Boston, as far west as St. Louis and Kansas City and also sent to Harrisburg, Philadelphia and New York.

PAPER DRINKING CUPS

The Cumberland Valley railroad has installed a slot machine in their passenger station at Mont Alto containing sanitary drinking cups for use of the traveling public on their trains. Everything is pretty in the machine it will throw out one of these cups to you on the turn of a coin. This is a good arrangement as it will give each individual his own drinking cup.

ROBBED WAITERS

Mary Harris, a negro woman, was arrested at Hotel Edgewood, Pen Mar, charged with the larceny of $107 from two waiters. She was given a hearing at Smithsburg and held for court.

Dr. Wm. B. Barker Makes a Remarkable Statement Before Leaving from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

As he second some of the most notable advancements in his history, he does not hesitate in saying that he will positively guarantee Bloodine to cure sloan in the bladder or any kidney or bladder trouble, no matter how long standing. Nine by seven per cent. of the entire population of the United States are afflicted with kidney or bladder trouble. Of the last number three-fifths has scured 96 per cent. of the cases that have been treated with it.

Hundreds of cases of hemorrhage of the bladder have been cured after treatment in some of the leading hospitals have failed to even relieve the suffering. Dr. Barker has developed that one theory of treating these cases with bloodine is the only possible manner in which to relieve the excessive age of cases can be cured, that we do not approve of the United States are afflicted with kidney or bladder trouble. Of the last number three-fifths has scured 96 per cent. of the cases that have been treated with it.

Hundreds of cases of hemorrhage of the bladder have been cured after treatment in some of the leading hospitals have failed to even relieve the suffering. Dr. Barker has developed that one theory of treating these cases with bloodine is the only possible manner in which to relieve the excessive age of cases can be cured, that we do not approve of the use of the knife instead of bloodine.

Dr. Hymer, the business manager, of the Postal Telegraph and Cable Co., of Biddleford Maine, had a stone in the bladder and passed with six and one half bottles of bloodine, after being told by all of the leading physicians in his vicinity that the only way it could possibly be relieved was by an operation. We stand ready to furnish positive proof of the above statements and challenge the world to the truth of the same.

More than five million bottles of bloodine were sold in America last year and the demand is now greater than ever before. Over 2000 bottles were sold a single day in Cleveland, Ohio; 1500 bottles were sold in Rochester, N. Y., during Dr. Clay's introductory sale, and 1400 bottles in Paterson, N. J., in one day. Its actual effectiveness has ever attained such success in America. We are now supplying druggists with bloodine, for the convenience of those wishing to convince themselves of its merits. If your druggist does not have it, The Bloodine Laboratories, Boston, Mass., will supply you with a six weeks' treatment, six bottles, for $5.00; for a bottle, trial sample and booklet 10c. L. M. MASONIC HOME GOES ELSEWHERE

Confederate Home Institution for which Gettysburg Hoped, Will Have Expenditure of Two Million Dollars.

The Masonic home of Pennsylvania will be located on a beautiful site near Elizabethtown, Lancaster county, and far from Harrisburg. Several weeks ago these columns told of Gettysburg getting the home and the disappointment sorrowing between Money and Elizabethtown.

This was decided upon at a meeting of the committee of the grand lodge of Pennsylvania appointed last year to select a site for a home to be erected for aged and indigent Masons. The meeting was held at Harrisburg and presided over by Hon Wm Rehrig Grand Master George H Deming.

The committee toured the entire state last spring looking over proposed sites. At one time the Young farms, near Middletown, were favorably considered but the purchase of much of the available land at that place by the Slovenie association as a site for a Slave home made the Middletown plan impossible. The work in Gettysburg is fresh in the minds of local citizens. The chance finally car to the Wood farm near the Lisburn town and when it came to a vote the selection of Elizabethtown was practically unanimous. The price to be paid for the site of 200 acres of the Wood estate will not be made public until the titles pass.

A prominent member of the Masonic fraternity says that the selection of Elizabethtown means the manufacture in that vicinity by the Masons within the next few years of not less than $2,000,000.

GOOD PLAY

"The Lily and the Prince," given in Weiter's Theatre on Monday evening, was one of the best shows ever produced in Gettysburg. A large and pleased audience practically filled the playhouse. The play is a good one, it was well acted and prettily staged. Miss Lucy Blake, as "The Lily" completely captivated the audience and she was very ably supported. The song and attraction will be "Paid in Full" which is booked for September 29.

VIRGINIA WANTS BLOODY ANGLE

Southern State Wants to Place their Memorial at Bloody Angle. Formerly Talked of Site along West Confederate Avenue.

The Gettysburg Monument Commission held a meeting in the office of Governor Swanson, of Virginia, on Friday, at which was present the Governor, Senator John W. Daniel, of Lynchburg; Capt. R. L. Reid, of Mecklenburg; Senator Henry Archer Edmond son, of Halifax; Gen. R. L. Lomax, of Gettysburg, and Col. Thomas Smith, of Warrenton.

The commission discussed the matter of a site and named a committee, consisting of Governor Swanson and Senator Saunders, to ascertain if it is possible to get a site at the famous "Bloody Angle" on which to build the monument to the Virginia troops.

When the Confederate veteran Gettysburg several months ago it was announced that a site for the memorial would likely be placed along West Confederate avenue overlooking the scene of Pickett's Charge and that the memorial which it is understood, will be surmounted by an equestrian statue of General Robert E. Lee, would front that portion of the battlefield.

MORE STUDENTS

Says the Hagerstown Herald—"That the number of candidates for the ministry is constantly decreasing is the complaint of nearly all church denominations, to which the Lutheran church is no exception. Therefore a statement made by Rev. Julius Lobmeier at the intern' meeting in Baltimore, by Prof. Luther Reichhaus, of the Gettysburg Theological Seminary, that the number of theological students at the seminary is increasing was received with enthusiasm by the clergymen.

"Professor Reichhaus holds a high place in Lutheran educational circles. He was speaking before the meeting on the subject of the work and aims of the seminary, and in the course of his remarks made the statement that was so well received. The increase in the number of students attending theology at the seminary means, of course, that there will be a gain in the number of candidates for the ministry."

THE GREAT SHERMAN PLAY "THIS IS FULL"

The dramatic editor of the Albany, N. Y., Argus says of Paul Gerard Smith's great play, "Paid in Full" which will be at Weller's theatre on Wednesday, Sept. 29.

"Paid in Full' by Eaton Wallace, presented yesterday afternoon and evening at Harmanus Bleecker Hall, Albany, with an excellent New York cast, and theatrical managers there to see, is a great drama of every day life, the theme of the Sixth Commandment —"Thou Shalt Not Kill."

The main moral lines in American life today from the standpoint of the average man and woman. They may say play that has gone before, and it may have been the very right; Eugene Walter, as a man with a message for the American people, and his every command as eager a hearing as the latest 'Rake.'

The story of the man who believes the world owes him a living and he will take it by force, or by socialism and greed, tries to collect the debt from the pocket of his enemies, and his own at the point of a walking up and down the streets of the metropolis, made dizzy by the lure of the lights, and finally ends in jail, is told from the inside in 'Paid in Full' by Paul Gerard Smith. Gaol doors are uncovered, in four acts with plain American scenery, and a cast as powerful as mental helpsharmacy to drive deep the thought: with a climax reached in the Sixth Commandment that sweeps the play out of the stough into the light of day and sunshine and into a triumphant vindication of goodness, and a sermon in the story, with no cliches fast the moral by a denouement tragic with the inevitable.

The audience at the matinee attracted attention with his play, "The Underdog," which was based on the theme of Shepherd King' fame. failed to find success, is a recruit from the newspaper ranks, and his knowledge of them is in his work a simplicity, a human quality that makes the play a telling sensation, just on the level of the life of the average man and woman, grips fast and will not let go the interest. He has holied down commonplace characters and dialogue, and with the philosophies of egotism from Max Stirner and Nietzsche, Schopenhauer and Bernard Shaw, into the lives of people who honestly believed the world owed him a living and that he was going to collect it forsooth, he did not get as much out of it as the novi man, and his best friend, Phillip Brooks, who has contributed land pirates and sea pirates and other pirates and the captain Williams, Joe Brooks' employer, who has contributed the pirate of the coast all the Captain Kidds in the rough nuggets and pure gold of human nature, and the many hustle in harvested timbers. He has made Jimmy Smith, the boy detective of the play, a son of the Brooks' household, a sin-for Sight of Sherlock Holmes in actual world, and an equivalent of optimism, and the Sixth Commandment, and the good-accommodity in the heart of the public and be recognized as sane. Mr. Brooks, the good girl, with her faith in the future of human nature, her courage and cheer, is a wholesome character in the play, and every party and those with the irritating mother-in-law, the fussy mother-in-law, and the Japanese valet who is Captain Bill's family, make-up the persons of the drama.

The action takes place in the Brooks' home in Brooklyn, and in the office with Joe Brooks chafing at Jimmy's raise of salary and spouting socialism to the office boy, Phillip Brooks, in second act takes place in the Brooks' apartments, where Jimmy Smith, when Emma has bloomed into new youth and happiness and the promise of future prosperity, where the discovery of his theft is made known and here he receives the first evidence of remorse of his nature by accusing his life of having been taken from him and ends up in the climax of his sickness, a delirium in which he lives over his past life through Captain Bill's fondness. The third act is in the office of Joe Brooks' apartment, rigged up like a ship, with port and starboard lights, a pilot wheel and seaworthy effect, in the midst of which Captain Bill has evicted—an unforgettable character, and a piece of dramatic work to stand by itself, and the climax of human nature in the play is the point that he it is the same old hackneyed expedient of the women's conspiracy to bring about a right to the villian's apartment. The last act is laid in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eben's "Ghosts"—the artistic the interior of the drama. "Paid in Full" is a play with a big future

TAFT'S TOUCH FLOODS DESERT

Started Flow of Water Over 100,000 Acres of Arid Land.

LIVELY DAY IN COLORADO

Taft President Witnessed Relay Race Between Governors of Arizona and Colorado—Also Saw Apache Opportunity to Study Effect of Irrigation.

Montrose, Colo., Sept. 24.—President Taft, speeding across the western slope of the Rocky mountains and amid a succession of scenes typical of the great western country, in many respects like that of Egypt, but more interesting as he had since leaving Phoenix.

Mr. Taft stood on the brink of the deepest irrigation ditch in all the west and far out in the foot hills, with not a habitation in sight, made the practical connection which started a flow of water through 100,000 acres of desert that will reclaim 160,000 acres of arid land. It was a setting in miniature of the greatest irrigation project the United States government ever has undertaken, and the opening was made with a golden spade by Secretary Ballinger.

Then the president and party of 100 persons climbed into automobiles and sped away to the town of Montrose, where the president was to make his first address of the day. Here he was met by the governor and several thousand persons, and in the midst of a great throng of horsemen, by almost a quarter of a mile The Cheyenne Mountain Indian Band, with kodakcatchers, while the two sides of the street were lined with the backs of the riders were presented to the president, and he was forced to stand on the fair grounds track to with the two.

Saw Effect of Irrigation.

During the automobile ride the party made opportunity to study the effects of irrigation. Where the water had not would run through stretches of country for where as far as the eye could reach the only vegetation in sight consisted of a few stunted cedars and sage brush. Then out of a rocky canyon with rushing mountain stream, over terrible roads, where waving green fields of alfalfa and grain and orchards of trees below with fruit told of the wonderful change that water can make in the arid land.

At Grand Junction and here at Montrose, the irrigated farms and the orchards of the county fairs and was told by the chief engineer, Newell, of the project's field. Enormous peaches, up to the enormous weight of a pound, and almost every other known fruit, as well as enormous samples of the vegetable growth of the district, were shown to the president.

The High School has received a number of very valuable gifts from their friends recently. The latest and new flag presented by two patriotic orders of this place now floats proudly from the large flag pole given by the Alumni and the handsome piano or piano presented by the Alumni on Labor Day is in constant use and proving a splendid addition to the high grade of the entire school.

The grounds about the new building are rapidly taking shape in fine shape by Janitor Little. Nothing could add more to the starting grass before the celebration on Labor Day but now the lawn is in fine shape. In a few months and next Spring and Summer the grounds will be the prettiest spot at the Meade building. The cement walks and curb look well and the paving the pavement is a source of pride to the town.

One of the new features recently adopted by the Board of Directors for this year's work is a Monthly Report which will be made out by the teacher and signed by them and then sent home with the report for inspection by the parent. The book signed by the parent will then be returned to the teacher, showing both teacher's and parent's interest in the welfare of the scholars. Should any parents fail to receive these reports they should let the teacher know at once.

PLANK WINS AGAIN

Once again Eddie Plank has defeated Gettysburg fans by pitching Philadelphia to a 3-0 victory against Detroit on Monday. The following from a New Philadelphia newspaper comments:

The Inquirer: "It was Plank and Siemon again and, like the opening battle of the present series, Eddie outpitched the star of the Detroit's pitching staff. In fact Plank has outpitched Jones in both games. He did last Thursday. He had good control, his curve was perfect and he had it not been for McInnes' error in the sixth Detroit would have scored only one hit in the game. Following that error three hits were made, the second one driving in the first two of their three runs. In every other inning Plank was the master of Jennings' crew."

Record: "It was worth the price of admission alone, to many of the spectators, when Plank fanned the great Cobb at a time when the fate in the eighth inning. Cobb himself was disgusted, and leveled his bat as though it was a gun and pointed it toward the sky, indicating that Plank had him shooting ducks."

Press: "Eddie Plank was never in better form than Monday. Only six hits were made off his port-side delivery, and two of them might be adjudged as the scratch variety. And when danger w as nigh Eddie was as cool as the Rock of Gibraltar."

North American: "Eddie Plank, the shrewd southpaw pitcher, beat Detroit in the opening game Thursday, repeated again Monday."

SPRAYING SAVES THE TREES

The advantages of continually spraying your trees, is being shown this Fall in reports of the inspectors of the State who are making their final inspections of the nurseries of the State.

These inspectors show that where nurserymen have done everything possible to prevent the spread of scale, the trees in the nursery are free of scale. Where the nurserymen have been lax in the matter of spraying there are numerous complaints about the bad condition of the trees. If the letter of the law is carried out by the persons owning trees in the adjacent territory to a nursery there will be no scale at all in the nursery after a time.

The constant efforts of nurserymen to free their trees of the scale have been successful without a doubt that the pest can be so discouraged that in time the trees can be made absolutely sound.

The unusual climatic conditions this year have been exceedingly hard on fall fruit trees, but it is a noticeable thing that those trees that were sprayed with the lime sulphur mixture bearing fall crops have produced fruit more above quality and in finer quality than the unsprayed trees and the growers are now reaping the benefit by selling their fruit at fancy prices.

PROMISE BETTER TRAIN SERVICE

Railroad Answers Retail Merchants' Association and Promises to Give Better Morning Train Service. Town May Have Bargain Week.

Better train service on the Reading Railroad is promised in the following letter received by the Committee appointed by the Retail Merchants' Association to take up the matter with the railroad.

Dear Sirs:

I beg to acknowledge yours of the third instant with enclosure and I will say would respectfully state that the same has been given careful consideration, and I am very glad to be able to advise you that we hope to be able to comply with your wishes when our fall time table becomes effective.

Yours truly,

Edson J. Weeks,

General Passenger Agent.

This letter was read at the regular weekly meeting of the association on Friday evening and was received with great satisfaction. It is understood that when the new schedule goes into effect which will be within the next few weeks, the morning train which now arrives here at 10.30 will be scheduled to get here at about 8.15, leaving Harrisburg two hours earlier. The mail cars are to be taken from the train and sent over on a freight causing the passenger train first class throughout. The matter of changing the time for the leaving of the early morning train was also taken up. The railroad authorities consider the opinion of the association on the matter, suggesting that it leave at eight o'clock instead of six during the Winter months. This plan received the approval of the association.

The fact that better service is to be given here in the morning is a matter for general commendation and the association deserves the thanks of the community for their work in the matter.

The railroad people, however wanted something to return suggested verbally during a recent visit here, that the association seek to regulate the matting of patronage by backmen and the cards by fairs at the stations.

It was decided that a committee of five be appointed to be known as the Railway, Traffic and Transportation Committee. The duties is to seek to regulate the prices for hackmen, and to better conditions along such lines generally, at the same time dealing with other matters pertaining to the railroads.

OTHER BUSINESS

A new idea was proposed in the shape of the town having a bargain day or a bargain week. The scheme is to have every member of the association conducting a store have one article which will be a special bargain. No two merchants will offer the same article at a reduced price. Each day in the special week these articles may be changed and each store have a different bargain from the day preceding. The matter will be discussed next Friday evening and if the plan is adopted the week will be widely advertised and should bring a large crowd to town who will visit all of the stores in the town.

It was decided that it is the sense of the association that the College publications and those of Prof. Roth are legitimate advertising mediums and that the Star and Sentinel, Times, Spectrum, Hand Book, Lecture Course Program, School Bulletin, Institute Program and the Directors' Convention Program, issued by the association may give the above publications their support.

It was decided that October 1 be the last day for delinquents to pay up. This applies to all bills due the merchants by that time they will be placed on the delinquent list for association action.

A motion was carried for the appointment of a special advertising committee whose duty it shall be to issue such special advertising advances and mention or bar them

The invitation of the Weber Company to hold their meeting of the Association in their office was accepted.

ABOUT SEED GROWING.

Many sections in the state of Michigan are taking on a new life as a result of the beet growing industry, in which they have engaged. A farmer who has taken pains to look into the details of the sugar beet industry in several localities in the state mentioned makes a routinely favorable report of the prosperity which has come in these beet growing neighborhoods. One locality is reported of a farmer who paid $200 down on a forty acre farm right years ago. Last summer, when seen, he had paid the total $3,000 in full, had bought and paid for thirty acres besides, had erected substantial buildings, had all the machinery he needed, had a span of fine mules and $5,000 more than he was six years ago, as in the five years he did not know how to grow beets at a profit. Where good beets of five acres or more are grown the owner or renter usually owns for them himself. If more than the area, foreign families are usually hired to look after the crop, the price paid for doing the hard work being usually about $20 per acre. The beets fetch $8 a ton, and the average yield is about eight tons per acre, though many fields yield more than this. A farm that is worthy of attention in connection with the growing of beets is that of which they are grown is kept free from weeds and put in the best of tilth and in ideal shape for beans or clover, either of which may alternate with beets and potatoes or small grain constitutes an excellent crop rotation. The lowest value placed on the fresh beet pulp as it is fed to cows over in a pit or silo, while many who have used it consider it worth $5 a ton. A boy grown living within convenient shipping distance of a sugar factory should be able to write to the manager for information about the growing of beets. Many farmers who have grown beets for such a factory several seasons will be in charge of the fields and unbiased information as to the returns which may be expected separately.

HARD LICK AT THE START.

There is no method of handling the potato that will not get the start of a good condition or kill so many weeds as cultivating work with the hoe during the two or three weeks following planting. Assuming that the ground has been given thorough preparation for the reception of the seed, it is well to wait six or seven days, depending somewhat on the weather conditions, until the weed seed gets nicely germinated and is beginning to show above ground. It is well to give the field a very thorough harrowing, setting the drags up and then giving the same treatment at right angles. Again, as soon as the potatoes begin to show above ground, the patch should be gone over with a four shovel cultivator and the rows given a shallow cultivation which will start a new batch of weeds to germinate. At the end of five or five days, when the potato sprouts begin to break through the fresh covering, the field may be gone over again with the harrow crosswise, and this work will again swat the weeds in the row and not injure the young vines to speak of. Later on cultivation should be given, and if the soil is mellow and weeds are still germinating another treatment may be given with the hoe now when the vines have got past the brittle stage. Mechanical cultivation alone will not only put the soil in fine condition for the growth of the crop, but will reduce the weed pest to a minimum. All the succeeding work in the field, even through digging time, will be pleasanter and more satisfactory as a result of this weed campaign at the start.

LADYBUGS DESTROY SCALE.

The owner of an old orchard near Sylvania, Ft., has undertaken a quite systematic propagation of the ladybug as an aid in keeping in check the scale pest in the San Jose scale, with which his orchard had become infested. He has come to no large pile of such condition that he did not feel that he would be justified in accepting the help was on the point of cutting the orchard down on account of the scale. In some reasons the scale insects were not to be found. In making an effort the locality he found that a colony of ladybugs had made their home in the crevices of the trees, which he constructed the space between which was deep and good work. Since that time, a little more than a year ago, they have multiplied until every tree has its colony of them. During the summer the ladybugs crawl all over the tree, feasting on plant lice and the scale, and then fall comes they congregate at the base of the tree, where they spend the winter. This preventive has worked so well with him that he is confident he will have taken occasion of the bugs to their own methods.

AN ABLE ASSISTANT.

By ADELAIDE RUTH HILL.

[Copyright, 1920, by American Press Association.]

A sweet morning in June a girl of twenty stood in the doorway of a country place. Her figure is one head, a pencil in the other, and she surveyed the scene with a dreamy look very trying down the road. He stopped and looked up at the girl and said:

"Is this the Harrington place?" she asked, "it is."

The old saddle who owned it, I see, are dead, and it has passed into the hands of a stranger. They say he's a gida trotter and there's no more chance of his ever coming back than of the moon."

On the contrary, I am employed to lay out the grounds in an entirely new fashion."

"You?"

"You seem surprised to see a girl doing such work. I have just been graduated from a school of horticulture at — college."

"Well, there are your assistants! You can't do the job alone."

"I am not."

"How would I do?" he asked after a pause.

"You seem to be an artist, not a fitter for such work."

"Artists can't live on their artistic productions. I am willing to work a while to earn some money by work."

"Have you ever had $12 a week. $12 a day and found."

"I would have said $12 a week. I'll go to work right off if you like."

The man was surprised at the good gardener warning him that if the work was done he would have a resounding scatter, which was very fine. When she found that he was a person also agree to give her a week's notice before leaving. If he was not engaged, she sat him to work digging up the walks. It was hard work, and he did it well. At the end of the week she told him he'd better give it up.

"I can't afford to do that," he said. "You pay me what you are allowed and I'll continue. I'll find that I can employ two assistants and boss them. Perhaps I can get a man to help me."

He succeeded in talking her into the scheme, though she couldn't see where he was going to get the money to employ help for himself. He went to the village blacksmith and had the tool made, and had two tasty fellows at work. He set the ground accordingly and put in his own occasional instructions.

"I thought that you had gardener," if that isn't just like an artist. He thinks he can do it all. Well, if he doesn't make any money he can console himself that he's helped the work done."

Before the much time fore her plans, she strolled out and took a look at the garden and the next moment the outline of a landscape was sketched in her canvas.

"I would like to know," she said, "how you're going to get your money by paying your wages to others."

"I thought that was my affair. I hope to make money—getting other people to do the hard work and doing the skilled part yourself."

"You're doing that?"

"While you are—"

"Painting my face. I admit it. This picture will never be good for anything. I have been trying to get rich."

He seemed to have his own way with her. He would come when he chose, and, sitting before the piano, he struck several chords.

"This won't do," he said suggestively. "The thing won't have to be tuned in years. These people can't expect you to come and go with the piano. Is the agent's name?"

Before she could stop him he had rung up the agent on the telephone. And she was astonished at his cheek.

"Miss Elmcott, the head gardener, wants to know if you will send a man leaving the piano in such a condition? I can't do so as if you had to keep on to tune it right off she'll throw up her job."

He flung down the receiver and remarked:

"Upon my word" she exclaimed.

"Nothing more than you may need."

"If he doesn't have a tuner here by tomorrow morning I'll throw up my job."

POST OFFICE BURGLARIZED

Dunover Post Office and Store of D. A. Mickley at Some Place Dollfred during Early Morning Hours.

The post office at Cashtown and store of D. A. Mickley in the same building were entered at about two o'clock a. m. Friday by persons who secured a small sum of money and some other booty. The work was evidently done by amateurs but there is no clue whatever to the guilty parties.

The miscreants gained entrance by boring through the lower part of the door with an auger. More than a score of holes were made and in this way they were able to get the door from its lower hinges and to gain entrance.

The men were evidently in search of money. They got a lot of small change from different parts of the store and office. Mr. Mickley being the postmaster at Cashtown. Two pairs of shoes were taken and a few cigarettes but nothing else is missing so far as is known at this time All the change obtained amounted to less than $1. 00.

A large safe containing considerable money and a quantity of stamps was left untouched, adding still further to the plausibility of the theory that amateurs did the work

They were unheard however, and the residents of the West End town are at a loss concerning their identity.

CUTTING CORN CROP IN COUNTY

Various Portions of the County Give Entirely Different Reports Regarding this Year's Crop. Some Good Crops.

All over Adams County the farmers are now busy cutting their corn crop and from different sections come vastly different reports as to the size and quality of the yield.

In some places at this time of the year corn has been cut for several weeks but the drought retarded its growth seriously and in many places almost ruined it entirely. Conversations with farmers living in different parts of the county reveal interesting conditions.

One residing near New Chester said: "I find my corn crop is going to exceed that of last year despite all this talk about the short yield. My neighbors are busy cutting now and expect to finish by the end of the week We are very pleased with it and have no cause to complain."

Another well known farmer residing near Two Taverns said: "I will scarcely have any corn cut at all this year. The stalks are small and the corn not matured. My crop is almost an entire failure."

"The corn crop in the immediate vicinity of Gettysburg," said another farmer, 'will be better than in most of the sections of the county. This is due to the fact that several local showers passed over this section at the time when they were most needed while other parts of the county got no rain at all. I expect to have a better yield from the same amount of land than last year."

This is a busy time all over the county now. Seeding, corn cutting and other outdoor labors are occupying the greater part of the attention of the ruralites. The Fall crop of surprise parties is beginning to mature as will be seen by the number appearing in these columns, and after the day's work is over the farmers and their families are spending pleasant social evenings with friends and neighbors.

CONTRACTORS AND BUILDERS BUSY

Houses and Buildings of Other Character Hurried Along as Summer Comes to a Close and Fall Opens.

Contractors and builders continue to get in busy hours as the first days of the Fall season pass by and they are hurrying along work on the many building operations in hand.

The foundation for the new home of Mr. Biddle on Water street has been completed. The house which is to be a handsome building has a concrete foundation.

Though not fully completed Amos Eckert is moving into his new home on Springs avenue. The residence is one of the most substantial new structures erected in that part of town.

The stone walls of the new bank building are approaching their destined height and the large steel supports for the roof are being put in place The real beauty of the building will be shown only after the portico has been erected.

Mrs Rinehard's new home on Springs avenue is being hurried along. Quite a large amount of her goods has been stored on the attic floor of her home, the remainder being put away until the house is fully completed.

The handsome new front house of N. H. Musselman on East Middle street presents an imposing appearance and is one of the finest residences in that part of town. The building is now and commodious and has been pushed right along.

The new addition to John M. Wagner's building at the corner of East Middle and Baltimore streets is being hurried. It is now under roof and the interior work will be completed as fast as possible. As noted in other columns some weeks ago the first floor will be for moving pictures, the second and the second will be used for flats.

The brick residence on York street being erected by Frank and Edward Schriver have reached above the second story and the brick and stonworkmen are making good time.

Other building and improvements in the town are numerous and Gettysburg is showing the effects of a busy Summer. Almost every visitor comments upon the great number of new residences and remodeled old ones which may be seen on almost every street.

Miss Elsie Stegmaster has returned to her home on Seminary Ridge after spending the Summer in various parts of Michigan.
